What is Solar Meitheal?

Solar Meitheal is for helping households, community facilities and small local businesses to install Solar PV. Meitheal is an old Irish term that refers to people coming together to help one another harvesting crops, saving hay, or cutting turf. It embodies the spirit of community, cooperation, and working together.

This project channels that same spirit, helping communities work together to install Solar PV, reducing energy costs, improving comfort, and lowering carbon emissions.

The project is open to households, community facilities, and small local businesses across five villages and their hinterlands within the Tipperary Decarbonising Zone.
